

COAST FORESTS LAST BIG SUPPLY

ity on the lumber supplies of Washington that the privately owned virgin timber supply of the state will be virtually gone in 20 years unless forest policies are changed.

Forest depletion in Washington has proceeded much further than in Oregon, the report says; and while an expansion of the industry in Washington under the increased demands from eastern markets may reasonably be expected, by far the greater part of the expansion may be looked for in Oregon.

Local consumption must be taken into account in considering the demand upon the forests, the report points out. The situation in California is cited as an example. The state has been an important source of export material from the earliest days. Large quantities of lumber are still exported from it to the east and to foreign countries, but the state's population and agricultural and industrial development have more than kept pace with the output of lumber, so that it is doubtful whether production has exceeded consumption since about 1875.

Big Increase in Cut Expected

It can be expected, according to the report, that the lumber cut for the Pacific coast states as a whole will increase very materially during the next 10 years. A gradual rise in logging costs is inevitable as the more accessible stands are cut, and it becomes necessary to extend operations to the more mountainous logging changes. The timber resources of the Pacific coast states are very large, but it would be very unwise to overestimate them, for much less than the total stand is readily available.

Although the Pacific coast states have large amounts of timber, the report points out that they will be called on to supply increasing amounts of lumber for the whole country. The danger is that, like other forested regions, they will be considered " inexhaustible " until it is too late. While the government has established a number of National Forests in these states which are devoted to growing timber, other measures are necessary to prevent depletion of the Pacific coast forests.

AUSTRIAN WIDOW

CLEVER SMUGGLER GENEVA, July 15. (By Mail.)—Madame Bella Hartmann, young widow of an Austrian officer has been sentenced at Lindau to pay a fine of 50,000 marks and serve one month in jail, for smuggling. It is said she defrauded the Berlin and Vienna authorities out of more than $3,000,000 by means of a small army of employes at Lake Constance who used six automobiles, three motorboats and other paraphernalia in their illicit business.

PEARL OIL (KEROSENE) for HEAT

HAVE YOU INSURED YOUR HAY?

A spark blown about by a vagrant breeze, an almost unnoticeable smudge, a small blaze which rapidly develops into an uncontrollable fire, and your hay crop, representing months of care and hard work, is reduced to useless ashes. This is a frequent occurrence throughout the country. You can't bring back the hay, but you can recover its equivalent in dollars if you have had it insured, and dollars can buy more hay. If your hay is not insured you lose heavily and irredeemably. The cost of insurance is nominal. Let us insure your crop in a company that is prompt and reliable. James H. Driscoll, Room 4, Loomis Building.
